Commissioner's Comments

I would give myself an A since I do have a great team coming out of the draft. However, I am harder on myself than anyone else. I should have gone RB in the 2nd to have more RB/WR balance on my team. Kelce has been so dominate for so long, I had to take him in the 1st, but I fear this is the year he finally drops off and I don't get the position advantage I drafted him to be. Having an awesome 4th WR in Jeudy is great, but not going to do me any good week-to-week on my bench. I would have preferred Gus, Jamaal, or Mostert over Chase but I got triple sniped in the 3rd round. Chase is OK with a locked in role which should be good enough for RB2 numbers, but there is little upside. I will need Carter or another waiver wire wonder at RB to help me get over the top. I am ok streaming QBs this year while I wait and hope Trey Lance gets an opportunity to take me to the promise land.

Commissioner's Comments

Dana didn't have a great keeper to start the draft, but she made the most of her opportunities. There is a lot of upside with her WR group IF they can stay healthy. Julio and Aiyuk don't have the best track records though. Win or lose this year, Dana will enjoy rooting for Najee on her beloved Steelers while cursing Paul for taking her Steeler D. I really like Harris, but the rest of her RBs have little upside. It hurt me that she sniped Hurts from me. I wanted to pair Hurts with Trey Lance. This is what happens when you share your cheatsheet. I like Jalen's early season schedule and running ability for early season streaming. She will have to keep a close eye though on future matchups in case the Moustache takes over for the Eagles.

Commissioner's Comments

Not even my son could screw up starting with Zeke and the 1st overall pick. He continued to build a strong team with Robinson and Lockett to give him the stable floor with Robinson and the boom/bust of Lockett. Antonio Brown has a great pick in the 7th and another player I got sniped on but I wasn't too miffed since I was able to grab Judge Judy and my WR corps is already the best in the League. Hock should get peppered with targets, but Goff is such a downgrade from Stafford. If Tannehill can be as efficient as last year, David should crush the Broads division on the way to the Playoffs.

Commissioner's Comments

My brother will need Brady to throw 50+ TDs this year to have a chance to compete. He doesn't have a RB1 this year. He may believe in CEH, but I don't see him being a bell cow. He is basically Chase Edmonds+. Lions haven't had a RB1 in fantasy in decades. Mostert can provide a few weeks of good production before he gets hurt again. I do like Jakobi Meyers as a great depth pick. If I wasn't already so loaded at WR, he was definitely one I was targeting with Big Mac Jones at QB now. There is a lot of hype around Pitts, but I am not convinced he will finish Top 5 and Steve took him as TE5. Overall, Steve's team isn't garbage like usual but I can't say he will compete with David this year. He will forever be stuck in the bottom tier Broads Division.

Justin does it AGAIN! He has drafted another Championship contender this year. His only weakness is at TE which is a crapshoot anyways after the top 3. He sniped me on Javonte Williams who I see as taking over the Broncos backfield 2nd half of the season. He can afford to wait as long as Gibson and Taylor can stay healthy. I do have some concern over Gibson's turf toe, but he seems 100% this preseason. DK and Dionte are a dynamic WR duo. It may take Ja'Marr some time to adjust to the NFL, but Anderson and Jones are solid flex plays. I was torn whether to go Lance or Fields for my upside QB pick this year. I went for the home run, but Fields should be really good once he takes over for the Red Rifle. Could be trade bait for QB needy teams in the middle of the season. Well done, Justin. Commissioner's Comments

When your RBs are as weak as this group, the highest I can go is a C-. It really doesn't matter how I grade Tracy's draft because 80% of his drafted players will be gone by mid-season. I am sure Tracy is waiting for Harris to have a 3 TD game so he can find a sucker to trade him to. We will see how soon Sony can usurp Henderson for the Rams, but that is not a high bar to cross. Tracy loves high risk/high reward and this year is no different with his lottery ticket RBs. Tracy may be in danger this year of finishing last in the Beards Division but he is scrappy and will find a way to fix this turd of a draft.

Commissioner's Comments

As long as Dak can stay healthy, this team should compete. Travis has good balance at his RB/WR positions so hard to go lower than a B for his grade. Henderson will be a good early season flex while Sony gets incorporated into the offense, but I thought there were better options on the board, e.g. Gaskin. Travis punted on the TE position whether that was his intention or not. Give me Higbee over Gisecki all day long. Travis is on course to have his sucky season this year. He is the Matt Ryan of fantasy football.

Commissioner's Comments

This is the 1984 sequel version of Wonder Woman not the acclaimed original. I could not believe she went Tonyan in the 5th when she could have improved her WR depth. There's not much difference in the middle tier TEs, so why grab one so early? I do like Higbee, but now she has the nightmare of figuring out which one to pick each week. Seems like a waste of a roster position. Linda's RBs are putrid. Her only real strength is at QB, so why would she need to get a 2nd one let alone Trevor Lawrence? She can enjoy looking at his golden locks as she heads towards the Crapper Bowl.

Commissioner's Comments

Cardinal rule of drafting is that you never go early TE and early QB. It just doesn't work out and leaves you WEAK at the more important RB/WR positions. Outside of Cook, Paul's RBs are skank! Evans has a safe floor, but Brady is going to spread the ball around so his upside is limited. As a past owner of Kyler and Kittle, their upside is so tempting but their propensity to get injured is painful during the season. It cost me my fantasy football playoff streak last year. It will cost Paul a Championship playoff spot this year.

Commissioner's Comments

Is this really a shock? We really have to rethink the Crapper. It seems we have way too many owners wanting to sit on it! Gary went all in on ensuring NO ONE is going to challenge him for the prized seat on Draft night next year. It is pretty hard to pick a team as horrific as this one. Gary set the tone drafting Mahomes #2 overall after keepers and it was all downhill from there. You can pick blindfolded in rounds 2 and 3 and get decent players so he gets no credit for CeeDee and Hunt. Picking a 2nd QB after Mahomes is some second level stupidity right there. Every family has a special child. Gary is ours.

You are already in a big hole when your keeper is a QB. Krug was fighting a losing battle trying to build a competent team in the draft this year. I must say, he did a decent job for once. His first 4 picks set a solid foundation. Unfortunately, then the rest of his draft was pedestrian. Cooks is the #1, but does anyone want a Texan this year in fantasy? The Texans are almost as bad as Gary's team. This is a mediocre team which will finish with a mediocre record in a mediocre division. C's may get degrees in college, but they get you in the Crapper Playoff in the BBB League.

Commissioner's Comments

This is what intelligence looks like in a draft. It's hard to come by in the BBB League, so you have to appreciate it when you see it. It's always nice to start with the #1 player in fantasy as your keeper, but Jordan never let up. He can afford to let Barkley have a slow start while he gets his legs back under him. The only reason this is not an A+ is because his WRs are suspect after Tyreek. There were better options than trusting a Giants WR this year. Callaway will surprise as the WR1 for the Saints until Thomas returns. Unlike Paul, Jordan knows to handcuff his stud RB in case of injury. In Paul's defense, Justin did pull his back out reaching for Alexander Mattison in the 8th round. This is a strong team that should have no problems dominating the Bros division on his way to the premiere Beards division in the BBB League where he belongs.
