Commissioner's Comments

David may have been sitting on the Crapper, but he drafted a winner. Only questionable pick was Fat Eddie Lacy, but I guess he wanted to have all the fat running backs on his team. David is taking the Biggest Loser theme a little too literally. He is the favorite to win the Broads division which would be one hell of a turnaround to go from the Crapper to the Championship playoff. He may not live long enough to see the playoffs, since he sniped the Steeler's Defense from Dana. He has gone from sitting on the Crapper to being in the Crapper with Dana.

One of my favorite movie lines is from Animal House. "Drunk, fat, and stupid is no way to go through life." It's no way to go through a fantasy football draft, either. The result is 3 QBs and no wide receivers. Gary got a gift with Spencer Ware blowing out his PCL which elevates Kareem to starter status. God does look after drunks and fools, even during fantasy football drafts. I am praying God has a sense of humor and we get to see Gary wearing the Superman Underoos on the Crapper.

Paul was at the draft in body, but was absent in spirit. The fantasy fairies knew and doled out their punishment. Down goes Spencer Ware. This team lived up to his draft team name. It is full of trashy players. Paul needs us to show him our TDs, since his team won't be scoring many. He will need to step up his game to compete in this League.

Like a transvestite, this team doesn't know what it is. So many boom/bust players. Is this team full of players who you want to score with? Or are they just a bunch of imposters masquerading as something they are not? The only thing I do know is that Farm Boy will find a way to miss a chance at the Belt.

Who was the draft night winner? Beaker accurately sang "Mee Mee Mee". This team is stacked. Barring major injuries, this team should have a solid path to the Championship playoffs. I am just glad Beaker doesn't play in my division. Beaker doesn't say much, but he spoke with his picks. Well done, Todd. Well done.

This team leaves me as excited as watching a movie on the Lifetime channel. Miller, meh. Abdullah, meh. Perkins, meh meh. Beckham is as fragile as a liberal's feelings. The rest of the WRs aren't much better. Accepting Travis' side bet that he would make the Championship playoffs was the easiest $20 I have ever made. This team should be called "Bernie's Busts" since it will lose as much as the failed Senator from Vermont.

Commissioner's Comments

No amount of luck is going to help this team this year. I knew this team would suck as soon as Linda picked Zeke in the 1st round. 1st round for a player who will miss at least 4 games, if lucky, and up to 6 weeks if his suspension stands? In the 2nd I could understand, but Linda has garbage behind Zeke. She is giving the Grouch a challenge for the team with the most trashy players. Linda will have to be lucky to avoid the Crapper next year.

Commissioner's Comments

I was playing with house money after keeping Bell in the 4th and Jordy in the 15th. I capitalized by spending it on Aaron Rodgers. I suck at making lineup decisions, so I decided I would grab my stud QB and have one less decision to make each week. Stud wide receivers kept falling to me, so I kept adding them to my squad. I could easily have four top-15 wide receivers on my team. I may need it since my RB troop and TE are pretty weak. TE has the fewest points differential between 1 through 12, so figure I can take some risk there and play waiver wire, if need be. The obvious fly in my plan is whether Bell can stay healthy after holding out. If he goes down, I will have to rely my QB and WR can carry me into the playoffs.

Commissioner's Comments

Justin has done it again! He successfully drafted all the sucky players onto a draft day no-show team. Blount will be lucky to make the Eagles final roster. Gore is on a team with no QB right now. Dalvin Cook is still unproven. He is primed for the post hype letdown this season. The Crow is a pretty pour lead RB. Good luck figuring out which WR to start every week. I am not sure why Footballguys likes this team so much. Brady is great, but he can't carry this team. I agree with the Guru. This is a bottom tier team destined for the Crapper Bowl due to missing the draft. It's Karma.

Commissioner's Comments

Like me, Justin had some draft house money to play with since he had two strong keepers in Devonta and Thomas. Unlike me, Justin chose to spend his on a huge injury risk in Rob Gronkowski. He is already behind at QB, so if Gronk gets hurt, as usual, he will have to rely on more waiver wire magic to make the playoffs. His RBs and WRs show real depth which is why his playoff odds are so high. You can never count out a past champ.

Commissioner's Comments

It is always bad karma to miss the Live Draft, unless you are Linda. She is just Lucky. This year Tracy didn't manage his draft schedule and chose his auction draft over the BBB League. Sad. He is already feeling the consequences with Meredith blowing his knee out the day after Tracy drafted him. Tracy's wide receivers are now as thin as his running backs. Weak running backs and wide receivers is no way to compete.

Commissioner's Comments

Dana's homerism shows through with her roster filled with 3 Steelers. If you are going to be a homer, having Antonio, Martavis, and Ben is about as good as it gets. The soulless Ginger still has some work to do if she wants to taste the playoffs. After Loser sniped the Steelers D from her, she went on full tilt. Her biggest risk is at QB where she only drafted Big Ben. Not only does he suck on the road, he tends to miss games every season. Dana is a prime candidate for Gary to trade one of his 3 QBs. Too bad they are in the same division.
