Commissioner's Comments

The Fantasy Footballers say you need to "stay water" in drafts, aka be flexible and let the draft come to you. This year, the water was a freaking sunami for me! My hopes of drafting my upside RBs were quickly swept away when Jonathan Taylor, Mostert, Akers, and Gibson were all taken before I could even make my 2nd pick in the 4th round. I was still hopeful I could snag Chris Thompson, Ingram or Dobbins in the 5th but they too were snagged before I could pick. At this point I knew I was in full blown zero RB mode in a year where really good WRs were a dime a dozen. I don't think I've ever felt worse coming out of a draft, but if anyone can salvage this and win another Championship it is me. Only reason I am not giving myself an F is because I do think I picked the best players available at my spot.

Commissioner's Comments

I really need to stop coaching Dana before the draft. Not only did she snipe Akers from me, she drafted probably the best WR group. Keenan in the 6th was a steal. Her RBs are top heavy, but at least she has Mixon to anchor her RB1. If Akers can emerge as the starter, she should compete for another playoff spot.

Commissioner's Comments

Every year, David gets stronger and stronger. Getting Lamar as a 10th round keeper is just a stupid competitive advantage to start with. Then the league gifts him the #1 draft spot, so he can just pick up Barkley again after keeping Tyreek in the 2nd. SMH. If Dalvin Cook's shoulder crack again, David will be locked and loaded for a Championship run.

Commissioner's Comments

Steve has some question marks with his RB health. With only 4 RBs rostered, it could get ugly fast for him. He has to be happy to have the Fresh Prince of Helaire for the next 4 years even if it costs him a 1st round pick for the foreseeable future. Wasn't sure why he grabbed Fant when he has Kelce and only 4 RBs.

Commissioner's Comments

The strong just get stronger. Justin was already playing with house money with McCaffrey and Jacobs as his keepers. Then he snipes Antonio Gibson right before I was going to pick him. FML Then he gets a gift in the 10th round sniping me again picking Gallup. Come on! This team has no weakness. My reign as the 5 time Beards Division champion is in serious danger this year.

Commissioner's Comments

Tracy's team depends on which version of DJ he gets. I don't hate his team. His WR corps has breakout potential, but are mostly TBD. Waller in the 4th was a reach when he could have drafted Gibson. Tracy's ineptitude just doomed us further in the Beards division. If DJ looks as slow as he did in Zona, we could see Tracy blowing up his team again. Who are kidding. Tracy is definitely blowing up his team again this year.

Commissioner's Comments

Travis' keepers were puzzling. He did have a great start with Chubb and Taylor, but Cooper and Evans were a barrier blocking better WR options in those rounds. Lions just picked up AP, so who knows how injured Swift is but in general I avoid Detroit RBs at all costs. Looking at my RB group, that is saying something. Breida was a player I just didn't know what to do with. In the 10th, he is a good flyer, though. An old and busted Gronk in the 6th seemed like a reach to me. This team seems destined for the Sarlic Pit again.

Commissioner's Comments

Once again, Linda starts the season with a good team. Her first four rounds were near perfection with Elliot, Kamara, Kupp, and Lockett. I have to ding her for often injured Hunter Henry in the 6th when getting a better 3rd WR would have been a better option. Both her TEs have injury issues along with her QB. With Kamara getting shots in his back, this could turn ugly for Linda.

You know your draft sucked when even Paul drafted a better team than you. If you had good RB keepers this year, you definitely had an advantage with all the WR depth in the latter rounds. If Juju returns to form with Big Ben, Paul could vie for a wildcard spot in the playoffs.

Could we have a back-to-back Crapper loser for the first time?! I am calling it now. Outside of Thielen, his WRs are a joke. That would be ok if he had stud RBs, which he doesn't. The only thing he did do this draft is snipe Ekeler from me in the 1st round, who I really wanted as my RB1. Thanks for that, Gary. Effer.

Commissioner's Comments

I am huge Conner fan and hope he can stay healthy. The odds of that happening are 3,720 to 1 which is why I didn't keep him as a 3rd round keeper. I loved the Josh Allen pick in the 8th. If I could have gotten some better RB options earlier, I would have targeted Allen. Krug was a real scoundrel when he sniped Mostert and Dobbins from me. Overall, this is a solid team. If something happens to Ingram, this team could give Justin a run for his money.

Another team who grabbed a TE in the 4th round and allowed Justin to grab Antonio Gibson. This is a team destined to disappoint. Between Bell, A.J. Green, and Fuller, this is the all old and busted team. There isn't much competition in the Broads division for David this year.
